Anyone who has been employed in the construction industry knows that using the right tools is a key part of quality construction work. From general contractors to tradesmen to construction accountants, having the correct equipment and the ability to use it effectively is a vital part of completing a successful construction project. The same principal also applies to running construction jobs. Construction companies need certain tools in place to help market and grow their business. The Internet is one of the most useful and inexpensive tools for promoting small construction businesses and developing professional relationships within the construction industry.

Many small construction companies today have not fully taken advantage of marketing and business development opportunities offered online. Some construction firms do not even have a web site or any kind of business directory listing. At one time, a web presence may have been optional for small businesses, but in todayâ€™s â€œjust Google itâ€• society, cultivating your business onl a necessary and versatile tool for growing your construction company.

To run a successful construction business and build a successful construction industry network, it is essential to have an efficient, reliable system for hiring people, locating subcontractors, and finding dependable vendors. It is also critical to stay up to date on industry reports and trends, safety regulations, and newly available projects. There are hundreds of web sites that can help you with any one of these tasks, but only ConstructionConnection.com operates as a one-stop shop for all the online needs of small construction businesses.

With tools like the National Directory, the growing promotional index of companies in the construction industry, and their unique, patent-pending job search tool, Construction Connection works to help companies get plugged in to their network of thousands of construction professionals, tradesmen, and workers. Construction Connection also offers informational and educational resources like Toolbox Talks, Construction Connection Radio, and their monthly newsletter to help companies and members stay up to date on the latest industry news and developments.

Construction Connection was created out of a need for a more effective and streamlined way for construction industry professionals to get matched with the right industry jobs and with the right industry opportunities. The partners of Construction Connection, both industry professionals themselves, listened to both company and individualsâ€™ dissatisfaction with the traditional job boards, the paid resume blasts, the overpriced resume services and overall lack of sympathy toward the individual candidate. They also listened to the dissatisfaction from companies who post jobs only to get many irrelevant results or having to purchase high priced ads to showcase their company. Construction Connection is a patent-pending, one-of-a-kind profile creating / match-making system. The system delivers effective results. Construction Connection saves you time, money and aggravation by matching people to people, people to companies, companies to people, and company to company.
