You may have also wondered at some point whether you could have your cell phone unlocked if you have a GSM type phone.

Maybe you do not know either of these terms mean, but this article will explain how to find unlock codes for cell phones, whatever the case.

There are two main types of cell phone technology:  GSM and CDMA.  If you have a CDMA phone, unfortunately you cannot unlock your cell phone.  If, however, you have a GSM phone, you have the ability to have your phone unlocking with an unlock code.  Once this is done, you can use your phone on any GSM carrierâ€™s network in the world.  This means no more roaming charges when traveling out of the country, or simply out of your carrierâ€™s coverage area.  This means not being locked into restrictive, expensive contracts.

Once you have determined which type of cell phone you have, it will be necessary to find a company that sells unlock codes.  The Internet is the best resource for this search, there are many sources for unlock codes. UnlockThatPhone.com offers unlock codes for virtually every cell phone manufacturer.  To unlock your cell phone, select your carrier, manufacturer and model.  It will be necessary to enter your â€œIMEIâ€• number as well.  This can be foun by entering #06# on your phone; the IMEI number will be displayed on the screen.  Select your payment method and checkout.  Once the transaction is complete, the unlock code will be emailed to you.

When you receive your unlock code, follow the websiteâ€™s online instructions to complete the unlocking process.  Contact the siteâ€™s customer service personnel at once if you encounter any problems to resolve them, do not attempt to troubleshoot the failure on your own.  The trained staff is willing and capable to help with any problem that should arise.

You can swap the SIM card between any GSM phones once the phone is unlocked, and use it as your own on any carrierâ€™s network, anywhere you go.

Make sure to be familiar with your original carrierâ€™s policy on early termination of contract and usage charges.
