The Northeast and the Mid-Atlantic receives maximum rainfall this year. It rains very heavily twice a week and the rain goes all the day. In this region there are many states that receive an immense rainfall more than the normal that is up to 20 inches or may be more than that. So this is for sure that blackberry users should be aware in protecting their smart phone from rain. Also if you want to save your gadget from the rainstorm or you are on the beach then you must possess a water proof case which is the only solution of your question.

There are plenty of options available in the market and out of them only two sounds good. The first one is the Friendly Swede which is an Amazon comdealer and is just like a pouch in which you may keep your Blackberry and close from the top. Such a pouch not only keeps the gadget away from the water but also protect the smart phone if thrown from 100 feet height with pressure. The pouch has windows on both the sides from which you may easily click the pictures as normal. The photographs might come out be unclear but still it is not a bad option. The best part is that the pouch accommodates all the size of BlackBerry very easily.

This waterproof pouch is very economical and you may get an Amazon for 23.45. The second option is the Dry Case consists of a pouch and keeps your blackberry dry. In this Friendly Swede case both the touch screen and track pad functions very well. But the adverse characteristic of this design is that the trackball does not function well. In this running time period the touch screen smart phones are getting popularity very extremely so the design is very suitable for touch screen.

For trackball devices dry case works little better and keeps the blackberry dried out in a vacuum seal pack. You just have to slip the blackberry in the dry case and suck the air out. A little air should be left behind as taking out all the air would make the trackball impractical. And with a small quantity of air the trackball and its keys function very well. You may get this dry case at a price of 27.24.
