Clear all your doubts with SAP forums by Micel Anderson

Article published on December 21st 2011 | Computer

You have to formulate a systematic plan to crack SAP examinations. You have to look for resources outside your SAP book for a decent performance. The first step though would be to understand the syllabus thoroughly. SAP syllabus will give you an idea to set an achievable target. Always keep your target well within your limits and never try anything impossible. The next step would be to understand the distribution of marks and the relevant topics. The task of creating your study schedule would become easy through this. Keeping aside the not so important topics will help you to save precious time for learning and revising the course content.

SAP forums can be very helpful to earn you a certification. However, you need to use this valuable resource carefully. SAP forums are usually formed with the best SAP professionals. Therefore, make sure that your questions are good and relevant. Try your best not to ask questions that may appear silly and unnecessary in the forum. Devote ample time to select your questions and ask wisely. This will help to maintain your reputation in the forum. Moreover, your questions will get due importance and the chances of getting a bright answer will also increase at the same time.

The people in these SAP forums are all well-experienced when it comes to implementing SAP techniques. In spite of being busy professionals, they have made themselves available in such forums just for the improvement of the entire SAP community. On the other hand, the SAP portal is also an excellent place to get your queries solved. If you search well, you will definitely find a SAP portal waiting to be discovered.

You can ask any question that comes in your mind in a SAP portal. Unlike SAP forums, there is no requirement for you to get selective with your questions. However, make sure to check whether your question have already been answered somewhere in the portal. Otherwise, it would be a simple waste of time on both ends. You can expect an answer for your question in a SAP portal within 24 hours. Sometimes, if you are lucky, you may even get your answer within few minutes. In order to save your time, you can check the way the previous questions were asked. The SAP portals are also an excellent place to find the SAP topics in detail. Sometimes, the information found in these portals can prove more useful to a book.
