Provide a Better User Experience with Wordpress Client Area Client Plugins by Jack

Article published on April 24th 2012 | Computer

You can make WordPress more functional by using plugins. The main programming of WordPress is designed to be very lean. This allows for the maximum amount of flexibility. Using plugins allow you to make customizations and add features that are tailored to you and your clients needs. Using a wordpress client area plugin allows you to design your website exactly how you want it. There are many sites available that will help you install, download, upgrade, manage and trouble-shoot your WordPress plugins. You can even develop plugins yourself. There are many resources available that will help you.

Wordpress customer area portal login page plugins allow you customize greetings and other features that are focused to your clients. You can set random features. You can also designate areas that are secure and private. This allows you to grant or limit access to areas of your website as you see fit. Using plugins you can personalize every web page if you choose. Every client can have a custom login page. All your pages can even have a different look and fee. As an administrator of your site you will be allowed to modify anything on individual pages. This includes test and background colors and logos. Adding clients is easy with the simple check in a box. Interfaces are easy to use and maintain.

The wordpress client area plugin allows you to easily assign user names and passwords for your clients. You can even use an email feature that will send the client information automatically. When you pre-format an email this feature is even easier to use. When a client goes to a wordpress customer area portal login page they can be automatically redirected to their specific page. This code can be created automatically whenever a client is created.

Other features of client pages can be hidden including navigation and dashboards. This is helpful in preventing spiders and robots from accessing them. With a wordpress client area plugin a user is required to be registered and there will not be a backdoor access area to the protected areas of your website. Using the automatic email feature can be used to alert clients whenever a page is updated. This feature should be used with care as you do not want to bombard your clients with emails. You also have the ability to allow access to pages to specific clients. This will only allow access to pages to those who have permission to view/access the page.

You can also upload files that are exclusive to a client or group of clients. There are many ways that you can control access to the information and features of your web site. While wordpress comes plain without any customizations plugins allow you to build and design a site tailored to you and your clients needs. You will slowly really the both the power of wordpress from the used of plug-in. Earlier wordpress was just a blogging platform however today it is slowly becoming a full-fledged content management system.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/computer-articles/provide-a-better-user-experience-with-wordpress-client-area-client-plugins.htm - Article Side

Jack - About Author:
For all your requirements of a wordpress client area plugin or a wordpress customer area portal login page click on the links.

Article Keywords:
wordpress client area plugin, wordpress customer area portal login page, client area

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!