VidoFlick â€“ make movie with your hands by Desiree

Few days ago I updated the VideoFlick published by BlazeVideo, Inc. because I was attracted by the feature of movie making. By the way, this is my first time sharing my user experiences online; I just want to say to you about how practical this software is.

As I opened VideoFlick, the home page let me felt comfortable because I can see clearly from the bottom, the key features are listed (share, edit and create). The interface seemed tidiness and simple. Then I began to make a little movie for my parents who were living in another country, telling them not to worry about me.

First of all, I used my camera to record a little video of mine which I had a brief description of my recent life. Then, I imported this onto the program, with using the â€˜Mergeâ€™ tool; I added a â€˜titleâ€™ video which will be appeared at the beginning of the movie, therefore could see my name at the very beginning of the video. Likewise, I also added my contact information on a blank page which will be occurred at the very end of the video.

On the top of that, I also wanted to introduce a movie to my parents. To do that, I clipped a segment from the movie with using the â€˜clipâ€™ tool, and then I used the â€˜mergeâ€™ tool to settle that section end of my video. By the way, I didnâ€™t forget to crop the whole video into a proper size that doesnâ€™t look too big or small. Lastly, I e-mailed my finished product to my parents.

Overall, I think this software is practical and very, very easy to use. Although I had only used this software several times, but through my experiences I can tell that, this is a really good one for editing and movie making. With using this software, a brand-new video will be manufactured by myself.

Then, why donâ€™t you give it a tryï¼Ÿ
