A Guide on Mini Scaffolding Uses for Your Project by Kevin Moze

Article published on August 13th 2012 | Customer Service

If you are a keen DIY enthusiast working on a project at thatâ€™s just a little risky and needs a stable platform, or a one man tradesperson doing various commercial jobs then you need to consider mini scaffolding towers and components.

Mini Scaffolding creates a safe skeleton around your project ensuring you are protected whilst providing a stable place to work which is great news if your spending a bit of time at a height. Who wants to be clinging to a roof while trying to concentrate on re-pointing a chimney or fitting a window?

Setting up your mini scaffolding tower properly right at the start means that you can concentrate on the job at hand. Below are some great tips and uses for mini scaffolding.

Convenience. Buy buying a mini scaffolding tower you have easy access to a scaffolding unit for a variety of building jobs. Cleaning gutters, repointing brickwork, painting and glazing. Much safer than a ladder when working at a height.

Storage. Mini scaffold components and units are lightweight and space efficient. Made of lightweight aluminium, mini scaffold towers are easy to dismantle and store safely without fear of rust or wear and tear.

Cost. Buying your own mini scaffold tower is a great idea for the keen DIYâ€™er or a self-employed tradesman. In no time your mini scaffolding unit will have paid for itself by ensuring you perform your job, safely, efficiently and professionally. Leaving you free to get onto the next job faster.

City work. A mini scaffold tower is a great option if you live and work in the city. Space is always a premium and mini-scaffolding units can be a lot easier to use and transport around, particularly in tight courtyards or apartment complexes than larger, more cumbersome scaffolding units.

If you donâ€™t want to commit to purchasing just yet then look for a scaffolding company that offers a hire service. The scaffolding unit may look a bit frightening with all of its components at the start but if you could put a Meccano set together as a child you wonâ€™t have a problem a mini scaffold tower. But for the first few times you may need some expert help.

Any reputable scaffolding hire company prides itself on keeping you safe. Itâ€™s how they stay in business. They can ask the right questions and provide exactly what you need to get the best result. Some scaffolding hire companies even erect the scaffolding for you at your site and a few will even provide labour for you too so you donâ€™t need to worry about a thing!

Speak to the experts at Mr Scaffold who can make sure you get the right scaffolding at the right price and most importantly in a safe way.
