Whether you are visiting Atlanta the very first time, you are participating in a business meeting, or you have family or friends in the area, there are several destinations that you need to make time to see if possible. There are many of Atlanta attractions that interest families, to senior adults, or anyone who would like to take time to learn more about this vibrant, growing city.

Destinations in Atlanta spotlight the city's vivid and fascinating history, its place in business and communications lore, highlight its fine art and its natural beauty, and celebrate its heritage. Whether you prefer the creatures at the Atlanta Zoo or the under water creatures of the Georgia Aquarium, the world of Coca-Cola or the CNN Studios, or the Museum of Art or perhaps the Museum of Natural History, there is something you'll find to enjoy in Atlanta.

You may wonder what do to in Atlanta exactly? The Atlanta Georgia Aquarium is the earth's biggest aquarium. It presents such functions as the 20-Minute Quick Dip Tour, an overview of the facility, the AT&T Dolphin Tales Gallery, and the Georgia-Pacific Cold Water Quest, an exhibit of the flora and fauna located in the very coldest ocean waters. Fun demonstrates and the Kids Corner permit all loved ones encounter life under the sea.

The Atlanta Zoo features giant pandas, rain forest gorillas, and an African Plains exhibit that is the home of lions, giraffes, warthogs and meerkats. Zoo Atlanta also offers a wide variety of reptiles and amphibians in outside habitats. If you don't like snakes or lizards, you could like Boundless Budgies, an aviary showcasing over five-hundred parakeets. Shows, trains and other trips, plus a petting zoo make this among the list of family-friendly Atlanta attractions.

In case you are interested in the information age, the Inside the CNN Studio Tour features the history of the ground-breaking news system. The invention of media mogul Ted Turner, CNN was born in Atlanta in 1980. You can take the world's top freestanding escalator to begin your tour in the Giant Globe. You may also uncover what it feels like to be a CNN anchor in Studio 7E, the interactive location which also features modern technology employed at CNN on a daily basis. When you are touring don't forget to take a CNN visit in Atlanta.

Perhaps you value good business models. In that position, you need to view the World of Coca-Cola. The popular drink was birthed within Atlanta in the late 1800s being an answer to prohibition of alcohol based drinks in the city. The World of Coca-Cola footprints the company's background by means of exhibits, such as a 1920s-era delivery vehicle. Another display area looks at Coca-Cola's place in popular culture as its bottles influenced such varied artists as Norman Rockwell and Andy Warhol. These types of Atlanta attractions emphasize the diverse but essential business lifetime of the city that keeps it increasing.

If you're more of an art aficionado, Atlanta destinations like the High Museum of Art is worth a trip. The museum's permanent selection consists of 19th and 20th century American and European painters. African sculptures from central and west Africa and Howard Finster's Outsider Art Paradise Garden are other exhibits worth seeing.

The Fernbank Museum of Natural History takes you back to a time when dinosaurs were the key population of the planet. A dinosaur greets you as you go into the museum, and dinosaurâ€™s battle in an display demonstrating predator pursuing food. Interactive exhibits such as Sensing Nature, IMAX Theater and Nature Quest help you participate in the natural world around you.
