Exotic, Exciting China Holidays for Travel Enthusiasts by Robertkaur

Article published on December 20th 2011 | Destinations

The Orient has always been intriguing to those searching for new sights, sounds and smells to fill up their lives. As the largest country in the region, China has always had a great affect not only on nearby nations such as Russia, Thailand and Korea, but also further afield across the globe. Thus, it is no wonder that so many people wish to tour this amazing country as it offers a myriad of wonders to the truly adventurous wandering spirit.

First, sites such as the Great Wall, the Forbidden City and the Terracotta Warriors are must-see attractions that should be on every touristâ€™s itinerary. Not only do these monuments showcase Chinaâ€™s lengthy history but they are also amazing to behold and will be imprinted into your memory for a long time to come. These sites are essential for anyone visiting the country, whether you are staying there for a few short days or are spending a few months travelling around.

China also has a great deal of natural wonders for those who are more inclined to see this aspect of this expansive nation. From rice paddies stretching far off into the distance to the towering peaks of the Himalayas, there is so much to see and do here. You can even go on China holidays to witness the wonders of the worldâ€™s third longest river, the Yangtze, as well as the dream-like limestone peaks of the Li River in Guilin.

While touring around this exotic nation, visitors will be treated to a wide range of delicious food, some more unusual than others. From the spicy delicacies of Sichuan to the world-renowned Peking duck, there is so much on offer to the gastronomic traveller. The curious can even find more unusual offerings such as deep fried scorpions and shark fin soup to satisfy their need to experience the unknown. China really is one huge kitchen where no one will go hungry.

If any of this sounds interesting to you, we recommend that you get in touch with a qualified travel agent today. Gaining the opportunity to explore this far-off, ancient land is actually quite easy to do, especially with the help of a qualified professional who knows where to go and what to do while there. Forget about floundering with the language and flipping through guide books; hire an expert guide instead and get ready for the holiday of a lifetime!
