Knowing the Attractions to Visit in Kerala by Renu Tichkule

Article published on December 22nd 2011 | Destinations

Traveling is an activity that can be both a relaxing and stressful experience. Relaxing because it can put you in an entirely new place that would refresh your senses and make you enjoy life anew. Stressful because, the planning stage is not a piece of cake and the expenses may be more than one first imagined if it is not thought out properly.

For travels to South India though, there are the Kerala Tour Packages that have been made in order to make the whole planning experience a little easier. These Kerala Tours come in different lengths so as to accommodate the needs of every vacationer, depending on how many days he or she wants to use for the tour. However, just like every package deal that comes along, it is always best to see the contents before making the final payment just to make sure that everything is satisfactory.

Kerala has so many attractions in store for its visitors; one may very easily get confused when going through the possible venues that can be visited. Be sure to cross reference the sites that you would find in the Kerala Tour Package that you are interested in with the top sites that one might find listed online. For example, a top listed place that you might want to make sure to visit would be the Revi Karunakaran Museum. This is a private museum that contains art pieces from all around the world. It is very well maintained, and the selections are excellent. Any visitor would have a blast hopping from one piece to the next, enjoying the exquisite beauty within each of the selections.

For the nature lovers and the romantic at heart, there are the tea gardens of Kerala. Not all may find this attraction appealing at first, but a walk through the garden in the early morning would be more than enough to change one's mind. The cool air and the rows of greenery would refresh a person's body, and the sight of the fields from a higher vantage point would prove refreshing for the soul. It would be the break from city life that every person deserves and dreams of.

The more adventurous people may decide to visit the backwaters during their Kerala Tours. This is considered to be one of the longer getaways from civilization as one would have no choice but to unplug one's self from whatever socket and just enjoy the view. The trips may range from an hour to overnight stays, but the effect is still the same: a refreshing journey over the water with the sound of waves lapping at the side of the boat, and a staff ready and willing to serve you at any time. For those who do not wish to spend even a night of their Kerala tour on a boat, there are also houses that stand on the water so that one need not leave the area.

One would not run out of options when planning a Kerala Tour. You just have to make sure that the Kerala Tour Package that is booked truly has the best sites so that the trip would not be wasted. Then again, the beauty of Kerala itself will make sure that no traveler wastes his time in the state's boundaries.
