The White Island Ibiza by Frederick Pollard

Article published on July 2nd 2012 | Destinations

Ibiza is a very popular island within the Balearic group and you will find it crowded most of the year. The typical architecture of the island has scooped the name white island and is the major attraction of the island. It is an island where you will find families, old folks and young tucks all having some fun and enjoying the much that it has to offer. It is a popular holiday destination.

The nightlife is boiling and the beaches simply amazing. You will also find nudist beaches here where you get all the freedom that you want to enjoy what nature has to provide. Those who love entertainment will find the discotheques very interesting. There is something for everybody in the island which is why most people find it to be the most ideal for a vacation. The culture of the island is simple and purely Mediterranean.

Things to see

City of Ibiza: you will find the most beautiful beaches in the Ibiza city from where you can enjoy lots of fun activities as well as the warm sun. There is also an islands group which is small but also very interesting on the southern part of the city.

Santa Eulalia: this is a village which is picturesque and a major attraction for tourists. The popularity is as a result of the modern installations and the extraordinary beaches that it has. It is a place which cannot be missed for anything.

San Juan: the great beaches here are worth paying attention to. You will also have the chance to learn a few things about the historical remains here and also enjoy the cave which has a temple that is Carthaginean in its interior. Close by is Sant Miguel with beautiful landscape and wonderful beaches.

San Antonio Abad: it is a tourist center and therefore very crowded. It stands out with the beaches which are some of the best within the island. There is also a small island and the nightlife is lively and boiling.

Ibiza has lots to offer to those who choose it as an ideal island to spend a holiday or even those who pay a visit and take a tour through it. It is an island which has a combination of everything that any tourist could ever ask for when on holiday and it is therefore not a wonder that it is a hot spot for tourists.
