Article published on December 6th 2011 | Destinations

With so much to see and do in Bologna, taking a city tour could be a good option for those with little time to spare. One of the most popular ways to see this magnificent city is a Bologna bus or walking tour. If youâ€™re staying at a Bologna city centre hotel, they should be able to help with tour booking information.

These types of guided tours are a good way to take in all the attractions without the worry of wandering off the beaten track. Both walking tours and bus tours will take you to see some of the cityâ€™s best landmarks and most interesting attractions, as well as provide a valuable insight into the history of the city and the wider region.

One such walking tour is a private tour, titled The Gourmet Walking Tour of Bologna. The entire trip last about two and a half hours, and takes you through the medieval markets. While exploring, you will learn about the cityâ€™s art, history and local traditions, and all about this cityâ€™s famous food.

Taking a private wine tasting tour is also a great way to learn about this wonderful city. Also offered as a private tour, the Wine Tasting in Bologna tour lasts about six hours as you are taken on a fabulous tour of the countryside food and wine highlights. Part of the tour includes a trip to the Old Vinegar Works, where you will sample the freshly-made Italian condiment. You will also participate in local wine tasting from a variety of quality winemakers.
