10 Steps to Ensure You Pass the SATs by Raymond Carson

Article published on February 17th 2012 | Education

If you are like a number of high school students, you're going to be aiming to enter college to continue your education. You'll have to determine which university will best suit your requirements and you will have already begun considering how you will pay for this next step in your life.

However, did you take the SATs yet?

A lot of students will begin in their in 11th grade getting ready for that important exam. They already know that it is vital to obtain a good score. A few will study constantly and many will all of a sudden cram only weeks prior to the exam date. But, what's the most efficient way to prepare for this exam?

Starting early, gets the job done.Make sure you have scheduled for enough time to fully and thoroughly review and focus for every single section. Donâ„¢t attempt to take this test unless you have supplied yourself at least many months.

Listed below are strategies to help you be able to study, to get your brain all set for preparing for the exam. Most will be so effortless you'll wonder why you didnâ„¢t think about it sooner.

Additionally, keep in mind that you can utilize free online SAT prep, and websites to aid in your test prep.

So, what exactly are a few of the ways you can begin studying?

Tip 1: Pull out your library card. Youâ„¢ll want it when you begin this first strategy. Read through a novel, or two. It does not make a difference what the book is, whether it's a funny novel, or perhaps the hottest sci-fi thriller. You'll encounter several questions which will examine if your studying and comprehending skills are well-defined. The more often you read books, the greater you may be training your mind so when preparing for the written test, you won't get left out.

Tip two: It's the perfect time for you to save an internet dictionary. Some of them contain a word for the day. You have to have a firm grasp on terminology as well as their interpretation.

Tip three: Go out and purchase yourself a notebook. Now, write something in it everyday for no less than 15 to 30 minutes. It may seem goofy or uncomfortable yet the time you take sharpening your writing abilities will be worthwhile after you arrive at that percentage of test.

Tip 4: Donâ„¢t dump the daily paper after you read through the local news or entertainment section. Look around, find that crossword puzzle and work it completely. There are also web pages on the internet where you may work a puzzle every day. This will help honeyour abilities, reading and vocabulary. As in writing in your journal, doing a puzzle can be a further strategy to make sure you will be ready to take the SAT.

Tip five: Confess it, you only skim through the paper for the headlines. Tell yourself that from this moment on, not an entire day will go by where you donâ„¢t read through the local newspaper. Get a story or article that you are interested in and give it an innovative title or read through to find an effective way to change a word or sentence. Do this every single day. This is certainly still training your thoughts to think promptly and cohesively.

Tip 6: You thought that it may be monotonous to do something to prepare yourself for the SAT.

While you are making sure to read, compose and do crosswords, just try a hand at logic problems. Each logic puzzle has every bit of information you must have to solve it correctly so take the time and focus on what is said.

Tip 7: Have a few crayons laying around? What about markers? If you don't, just go and get them and start drawing. You donâ„¢t need to be a skilled drawer, but hereâ„¢s why drawing is wise. As soon as you get to the math portion, you will stumble upon questions working with geometry. Sometimes a question will have a shape and different times it won't. By having a few months, building your skills at drawing, you should be able to handle the geometry questions much easier.

Tip eight: Sign up for a test question on a daily basis. Seek to work the problem out by yourself. Do a quick search, using key terms like, free SAT online, or SAT test prep. Choose one that you're comfortable with and enroll. The more you review, the less likely the test will appear overwhelming.

Tip nine: Make sure you can perform basic algebra. If you want a person to help, choose a tutor in your area. Do not permit this part of the assessment frighten you.

And lastly, tip 10: in the written text that is printed in the now popular book, The Hitchhikers Guide to the Galaxy, in warm friendly letters, donâ„¢t panic. If you take your time and practice the steps listed, you will find you'll be much more comfortable in taking the big test for your next educational step.

Get moving immediately. Please don't be reluctant or continue putting off reviewing. The more you put things off, the more likely you will not be prepared for the assessment. But with enough time and hard work on your part, you will have no problem with the assessment. You should complete it with little or no issue.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/education-articles/10-steps-to-ensure-you-pass-the-sats.htm - Article Side

Raymond Carson - About Author:
For added resources on a SAT test prep, a free online SAT prep, please view the attached links.

Article Keywords:
SAT test prep,SAT prep

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!