Education is booming in India. Drive through any small to big town or city in India, and you will see evidence of the boom. From paper leaflets to huge billboards, the advertising of new schools is relentless. The evidence of the boom in education is undeniable and heartening and in the long run that can only be good. More schools mean more opportunities and choices for Indiaâ€™s children and parents.

But with the emergence of new session every year, the problem which is faced by most of the parents is to get school admission for their children. The parents get worried about the daunting task of finding good schools. Choosing a school is one of the most important decisions parents have to make for their child. To have the best chance of getting the child into the school of your choice, one must apply well in advance. Making the right decision may appear to be quite daunting but one should make sure that the child receives a good education wherever he is sent.

Although all schools teach the same National Curriculum subjects but each school varies in size and the age group that they cater for, and each has its own characteristics. Some of the questions which keep on wandering in the minds of the parents are should they opt for an old, established school? Should they instead try out a new, innovative school? Is a day school or a residential school better for their child and their family? What kind of fees should they expect to pay for what kind of facilities?

Is a co-educational school suited to them or a single-sex school? The process of choosing a school for the child can seem daunting, but starting the preparations and planning early can help you to make a well informed choice. Making an early start will mean that there are fewer chances to miss the key deadlines. Another hassle task if of submitting the admission forms. Filling of admission form require a lot of effort and can take all your sweat. The process starts with collecting the admission form from the school. The second step is the filling of the form with all the details which should be done with extra care as a simple mistake can put a question on your childâ€™s admission and then is the step of submitting the filled form in the school.
