Studying medicine and becoming a doctor is a dream come true for the students as well as for the parents. The parents are the happier lot as they can now proclaim that they wards are studying to be doctors, which gives them immense pride. During the studying of the course, the students have to take a lot of trouble in the long years of college, but all of these efforts pay in the end when they come out being successful in their lives. For taking admissions into various MBBS and BDS courses, the students will be required to appear in the entrance exams in any part of the country and this is equally applicable for the medical colleges in Delhi.

The students need to appear in the DPMT or Delhi Pre-Medical Test, before they get admitted into the courses in the colleges and hospitals. Since there are many seats in the medical colleges in Delhi, students can take up their seats in large numbers and the students from all over the world are allowed to appear for the said qualifying exam which is known as the DPMT. Every year, the exam is held in the month of April/May and the successful candidates are given admission in the MBBS and BDS courses in the colleges of their choice according to their rankings in the qualifying examination.

Since these colleges under the Faculty of Medical Sciences in Delhi are all well known in the country, there is a rush of students wishing to take admissions in these institutes. Many students compete for the limited number of seats as allowed by the Medical Council of India, thereby raising the standard of competition. Due to this scenario of competition, it is mandatory that the students try their best to score good marks and come out with higher ranks, so that they can get the colleges of their choice.

Clearing the entrance exam of DPMT is not as easy as one might think and there is the need to work with dedication and sincerity towards the preparation for the entrance exam. There are many things that the students need to take care, but the following 3 points are worth mentioning.

Proper application process â€“ For success in any entrance test, which also applies for Delhi PMT, students have to first fill in the application and send it to the conducting body. The right figures and information are to be provided in the form, so that they are not disqualified. The dates are to be remembered for the exam date, in order to sit for the exam on the stipulated date.

Thorough preparations â€“ Since the competition is going to get tougher by the year, the aspirants for MBBS seats in University of Delhi, should make a sincere effort to go through the syllabus so as to cover every topic with thoroughness. Leaving out any topic from the course, which usually is limited to physics, chemistry and biology, can be a risk for sure success. Various books are to be referred and previous year questions are required to be solved.

Consistent practice -Another means by which the students can ensure their success in DPMT is by practising and solving previous yearâ€™s questions within the stipulated time. This allows them to have a feel of the actual exam and gives them confidence to attempt all the questions. Getting most of the questions right should be the aim of people and this is possible only if they know about the various topics and are able to finish within the allotted time.
