It was the most troublesome period of my life when I was in a dilemma to choose any one between my job and my baby. The present scenario of the world clearly says both the parents are required to work to lead a sound life and give a smooth life to their next generation. A whole month of mine went with a whimsickle mind. After a long struggle, I finally found the concept of day care centers. It helped me a lot by keeping my baby for long hours when I and my husband used to be at office for the whole day.

The thought of where to keep your child during the office hours gives tension to every parent. Moreover, when both of the parents are working then it becomes one of the difficult jobs for them to take care of their kids. Most of the parents these days keep a governess for their kids who can take care of the toddlers at their home itself or there are also parents who rather find it convenient to keep their kid in any day care centre.

Children upto a certain age kids always need a person to take care of them. If the child is a part of any joint family, then it is completely fine, but if the child is member of a nuclear family, then it gives a tough time to the parents. Day care centers are expected to pamper and take care of the kids in the same way their parents do when the parents are away from the toddlers. In countries, like the United Kingdom, Australia and North America, the same service is called as Child Care.

In France In 1840, Day care was originated and in 1869 it was accepted by the French government. In the late 18th and early 19th century, the same concept was originated in Europe. Studies have suggested that day care centers are not harmful for children because it provides them with different practice to the particularly when they interact with many other children.

The quality of day care centers vary from one to the other. It depends on the judgment of the parents to find out the best day care center for their kid in the same way they find the best school for their kids. Parents should be careful while finding out a day care center for their child because a bad day care center spoils your child by failing to foster positivity in the child. On the other hand, a high quality day care centre can help your child with better outcomes.

Though day care centers help parents by keeping the children for long hours, but it has been found from the records that when these children go to schools, teachers often complain about them for being the most disobedient students. It is true that no one else can give the same love, affection care to the children that they get from their parents. Parents also should not be over dependent upon the day care centers, and teach the etiquettes to their children when they come back at home.
