Article Side

Career in Project Management Profession by Terro White

Article published on December 3rd 2011 | Education

In todayâ€™s time all the companies want to plan their important tasks. Without a suitable project, they canâ€™t even think to get a desired result. Therefore, the demand of Project Management Professional (PMP) courses has been increased drastically from past few years.

There are many industries around the world seeking for qualified project management employees. And if you are planning to build your career in this field, you should first go through with PMP certification training. Only skilled professionals can make effective projects to get most out of their business. Without proper knowledge and skills, you will face many problems to look for a job in this profession.

During your training, you will learn many new things from theoretical as well as practical scenarios. And before selecting any project management institute, you should view details of many of them. After increasing the demand project management specialists, lots of institutions have been set up in the market. Thus, it is important to examine their complete details and then only take admission.

If you are living in Virginia, you have good opportunities to establish in this profession. There are many Virginia PMP training centers available to learn information from qualified trainers. They provide various certification programs for project managers depending upon the type of training, experience level and qualification of students.

But the Project Management Professional (PMP) certification is most popular among them. It is a respectable certification program among professionals and employers. Once you complete the course, you may face some problems in the beginning. But as the time passes on and you get experience, you will be having so many options to change your job. This way, you can switch to a higher paid job.

The eligibility for PMP is a Bachelorâ€™s degree with minimum experience of 4,500 hours or 3 years. In case you do have a Bachelorâ€™s degree, you need at least experience of 7,500 hours or 5 years. Along with experience, you need to have minimum 35 contact hours of education in formal project management. If you meet the requirement, you can submit your application.

Once your application is accepted, you become eligible for the PMP exam. It is a 4 hour exam with 200 questions. Various groups are allotted in it such as Social Responsibility, Initiation, Monitoring and Controlling, Planning, Professional, Executing, and Closing. You can take extra classes as well to get deep information about all these topics. However, never forget to thoroughly read them from your end.

These days, many organizations have developed their Project Management Offices (PMOâ€™s). They make a team of project management professionals to perform different tasks in such offices. When professionals work together in a group, they share their thoughts and opinions and create appropriate projects. It is helpful in many other ways as well to get a rapid growth in particular organization.

A technical background is always useful in project management. While performing various tasks, you will come to know more about them accurately with specific skills. Even you can help other members of your team and find out a right solution to resolve different problems.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/education-articles/career-in-project-management-profession.htm - Article Side

Terro White - About Author:
Without an efficient project management it is difficult to get continues growth in any industry. Therefore, the demand of a PMP certification training has been increased among students. After completing the course, they have better chances to get a highly-reputed job with handsome money. For more information, visit pmp-classes.com

Article Keywords:
PMP training, PMP certification training, Maryland PMP training, Virginia PMP training

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!