When we talk about manners, the first thing which stuck in our mind is behavior. The first step of the manner is considering good behavior. First and foremost, children should know how to behave with people. It is parentâ€™s responsibility to teach children some manner which helps them in their life. Basic manners which every child should have are like greeting people, waiting for their turn, being polite to everyone, saying â€˜pleaseâ€™when asking for something and saying â€˜thank youâ€™ after rec anything, respect for elders and teachers and so on.

Manners are something which helps children for the rest of their lives. Manners are seen in every aspect of the life and leads person to great heights. Manners and good behavior is considered to be the most important quality which any human has. If the child doesnâ€™t know how to behave properly than his brilliance or studying are of no use. Along with parents, teachers and schools also have huge role in making student learn about some manners and etiquettes. There wonâ€™t be any parent, who does not want his child to behave properly, but sometime kids misbehave and which leads parents into distress. Some of the common misbehavior of kids include using bad language, behaving violently, lying, destroying things at home, stealing etc.

when parents come to know about these kinds of behaviors about kids, they hit them or give them punishment, which is not good at all. They should deal with it gently and understand the reason behind such behavior of children. They should also know how to deal with it in a proper and polite way. As we all know that every child is known by his behavior and it is necessary for parents to teach good manners to their kids at early age. Manners should be taught as soon as child starts speaking which is around the age of two or three.

Good manners are very important for kids because it shows respect to elders and youngers as well. All parents should make sure that good manners are the part of every kidâ€™s life. If parents are serious about teaching good manners to their children at early age then their children would not have any problem to set the goals in their life. Parents should know the fact that manners are not something that a child is born with, it is something which every parent has to teach their child. It is similar like parents themselves have learnt from their parents.

So parents should know that good manners are like habits for kids which they take through out their life. It is also said that good behavior and manners are the key of success. Teaching children good manners will help them in understanding the world and they can deal with any kind of situation in future. In simple words good manners are something which leads person towards right direction.
