Foreign Language Education in School by Harry Yadav

Article published on December 15th 2011 | Education

Learning a foreign language requires time and dedication. The benefits of learning a foreign language is that one can communicate across cultures with people who speak that language. You can travel across the length and breadth of the world, understand what people are saying. It will also help you in conducting business with companies in those countries more easily because you can interact with your foreign counterparts. Besides, you can learn foreign art, literature and information easily.

It will enable you to have a change in your perspective which you will gain from seeing the world through new eyes. It is true that different language expresses ideas in their own way but you can compare the perception of your native tongue with the foreign language and gain new insight. It will ignite creativity and will give a new way to see the world and make decisions.

Researchers have found that newborns are able to distinguish between speech sounds from all languages, not just the native language spoken in their homes. However, this ability disappears around the age of 10 months and children begin to only identify the speech sounds of their indigenous language. We must understand the fact that language development begins in motherâ€™s womb. Understand that every childâ€™s language or dialect is worthy of respect as a valid system for communication. It reflects the identities, values, and experiences of the childâ€™s family and community.

Children learn very early about how conversations work as long as they have experiences with conversing adultâ€™s daily activities can be advantageous in language development of children. For example, while in the kitchen, encourage the child to name the utensils needed. We human beings are blessed with the most wonderful gift of God called language. At the beginning of the human evolution, people used to communicate through sound waves. By learning a new language, one gains new horizons, but at the same time the person reinforces own identity, and therefore also self-confidence.

Taking into consideration the importance of learning a foreign language, every school is now introducing foreign languages into the school curriculum. Most of these schools offer language studies in French, Italian, Chinese, and Spanish. With the foot step of globalization, the importance of foreign language studies is increasing day by day. Apart from the formal schools, there are many vocational courses available for foreign language studies. At the broadest and deepest level, it s probably also necessary for society as a whole to recognize the value of foreign languages and to create an atmosphere and an environment in which language learning

When you or some of your relatives speak a language that few people understand, this will let you talk freely in the public without any fear and you can keep the written material secret. The language will also help you in areas like suppose you visit a foreign place and want to prepare the food but recipe books you want to use are only available in a foreign language, so in this place your knowledge will work.
