Article published on August 23rd 2012 | Education

The Student Disability Allowance is a program that aims to help students with disabilities attain higher education. If you are a student with disabilities, the program can provide you with financial assistance as well as the necessary equipment to complete your education.

This program benefits students with various forms of disabilities. The most common disabilities are the physical ones but there are also other types such as the mental and the learning disabilities. All these types of disabilities make it difficult for a person to learn in a regular school environment. If you have any form of disability then you need special equipment as well as the financial assistance to be able to complete your education. These will be provided for you after you have competed and passed the assessment process.

If you have a learning disability such as dyslexia then you can benefit from the student disability allowance. You will be given financial assistance to provide all of your needs for your education. The funds from the program can help cover for the expenses of hiring a tutor, translator or any form of equipment that you may need for your education. If you qualify for the financial assistance then you may also use it in any way that you think is necessary for you to be able to study in a manner that is comfortable and convenient for you as a disabled person.

With the help of the student allowance, you will have the privilege to attend school just like the other students with no learning or physical disabilities. You have the option to use the funds to study part-time or full-time. You can even use the student allowance to pursue your post graduate studies and further your education. If you have a need to spend on travel expenses then the student allowance can also be used to cover the cost for that. Another way to use the funds is for the purchase of equipments to aid your studies such as computers, software programs for those with disabilities or recorders.

If your disability gives you the need to have someone to interpret sign language or take notes for you then you can use the student allowance from the program to hire someone for these types of services to help you in your studies. The money can also be spent on other student needs such as books, supplementary reading materials, internet connection as well as the school supplies that you need for your studies. In order to have access to these funds, you need to provide proof of your disability.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/education-articles/how-you-can-benefit-from-the-student-disability-allowance.htm - Article Side

Aaric Johnson - About Author:
In need of a Student Disability Allowance, visit Access First for assessment, advice and support service for disabled people and get a Disabled Student Allowance once your eligibility is confirmed. For more detail visit our website a www.access-1st.co.uk.

Article Keywords:
Student Disability Allowance, Disabled Student Allowance

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!