

Article published on January 13th 2012 | Education

It's easy enough to ask if your child is ready for pre-school, but the real question is whether you are ready for your child to GO to pre-school. Many parents have a hard time letting go of their little ones, but it is often because they fear their safety out of their sight. This is a good reason to investigate childhood education in Port Jefferson, NY before you enroll your child in any program of education.

Maturity Level of Your Child

An important thing to consider when you seek a pre-school for your child is his or her maturity level. This factor will determine the type of program you want for your child. Many pre-schools do not have graduated programs and place all children in the same program—three year olds, two year olds, etc. Since children do not mature at the same level it is important to enroll your child in a program that provides pre-school activities based on the maturity of the children rather than the ages.

Your Child's Natural Curiosity

Each child has a natural curiosity, but at the same time children have an interest in different things. A pre-school environment should not expect all girls and all boys to enjoy the same things but unfortunately this happens more often than not. For instance, there seems to be a misconception that all boys like bugs and all girls hate them, but sometimes the opposite is true: some boys hate bugs while some girls like to take them home as pets. Your child's pre-school in Port Jefferson, NY should cater to your child's needs and natural intellectual capabilities rather than placing all general in a general category.

Provide Self-directed Activities

It is certainly good for children to learn how to play together, but they also need time to develop their own skills at their own pace. A good pre-school will provide self-directed activities as well as group activities so that each child is able to progress at his or her own skill level. These are formative years for children, so they need a multi-faceted learning environment that is able to cater to the needs of individual children. Sometimes pre-school directors do not understand the need for both individual and group activities; this leads to unhappy and unhealthy children.

Make a Personal Visit

Never rely on a telephone call when it comes to choosing the right pre-school in Port Jefferson, NY. You need to make a personal visit—preferably without notice—so you can see the school in operation. It's important to evaluate the pre-school activities while most of the children are still there—this might mean coming before lunch if the school offers a half-day program.

You also want to view how the staff members interact with the children and each other. You should review the efficiency of the staff and the facility in general. All of these factors play significant roles in the quality of your child's pre-school education and future learning capabilities.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/education-articles/is-your-child-ready-for-pre-school.htm> - Article Side

Phineasrodney - About Author:

If you are interested to know more about a Early Childhood Education, Port Jefferson, NY, than please visit our website a <http://stepbystepmontessorischool.com/>

Article Keywords:

Pre School, Port Jefferson, NY, Early Childhood Education, Port Jefferson, NY, Preschool Activities, Port Jefferson, NY

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!