Hundreds of thousands of students are appearing in the medical entrance exams every year. The trend seems to be heightening with every passing year, rather than ebbing the enthusiasm. Medical profession, it is true, has a lot of aspirants and they will have to go through the bachelorâ€™s degree to become doctors. To enable the students from different regions to study medicine and related health subjects, there are plenty of medical colleges in the country, spread across the length and breadth of the nation.

In the eastern part of India, the states of West Bengal and Odisha have been leading the charge of such health related education. The capital cities of these two states have become the centres of medical education, although other cities in these two states have also few medical colleges. The benefit has been for the students of the states because they can now easily go for the medical colleges in Kolkata and medical colleges in Bhubaneswar. Accessibility to these cities is very good with adequate railway communications, bus transportation and flight connectivity.

The fervour to study in the medical colleges in Kolkata has been such that people from outside the state are choosing them for their MBBS and BDS courses. They qualify through the all India entrance tests and travel to the city of Kolkata to go through the medical curriculum. Not only is the standard of education high but the city of Kolkata is peaceful to live in and convenient from many aspects such as accommodations, cuisine, availability of different shops and malls, etc.

Bhubaneswar is among the fast growing capital cities of the country, attracting many students from all over the country to carry out their education. Being safe and peaceful, students prefer to study in the medical colleges in Bhubaneswar. Colleges such as Hi Tech Medical College, IMS & SUM Hospital and medical college, and Kalinga Institute of Medical Sciences are some of the medical colleges in Bhubaneswar which have captured the imagination of students from nearby states.

Every year, thousands of students appear in the entrance exams conducted by the respective universities, allowing the students to take admissions in the MBBS, BDS, Pharmacy and other allied subjects. This concept to study in the medical colleges in the eastern part of India is being favoured by students from far and wide, every year, increasing the number of applicants from outside the states.

The medical colleges in Kochi are also getting recognition from the students outside the state as well as from Kerala, so that there are plenty of applicants to study in these colleges. Amrita Institute of Medical Sciences is one of the well known medical colleges in Kochi, where the quality of education is maintained at the highest level. Students passing from these colleges are well versed in patient treatment and knowledgeable enough to be at par with the students from the top colleges of the country.

Presence of medical colleges in the cities of Kolkata, Bhubaneswar and Kochi has enabled thousands of students to fulfil their dream of becoming doctors, thereby increasing their popularity every year. With a high quality of education and practical exposure, these institutes have been leading the trend of studying medicine to become established doctors.
