Article Side

The Formula to Write a History Dissertation for Your Masters Degree by Donna Santos

Article published on February 22nd 2012 | Education

You probably are facing the challenge of writing a thesis about past events of humanity

Are you looking for a basic formula to write a thesis relating to past events of humanity?

All you need is proper explanation on how to write a history dissertation. It is not as difficult as you think it is. The basic formula of writing a thesis remains the same. The only difference is that when writing about past events, you have to state historical facts. You have to explain why a certain event occurred and how did influence an economy and its people.

How to write a thesis?

For this purpose, you require a basic structure of which is as follows:

Title page

This consists of your title, your name, reason for writing on this subject, and your institute is name.

Acknowledgment

In this part you thank and appreciate all the people who helped in writing.

Abstract

This is a summary of your entire thesis. In this chapter you cover all the key points, so as to give the reader an insight of your paper. This will give the reader what it is about, what is its purpose, what methodologies are used for research, and what are your own findings.

Prologue:

History dissertation introduction covers the reason for your choice of research topic. It introduces the reader with the research question and establishes a clear hypothesis.

Literature review

This is a detailed discussion of your topic. In this section you will present all the information that you have collected regarding you topic. The information should be relevant and related to your field of study. The presentation of the information should be in such a format that reader does not find it difficult to understand. You will answer your research question in every possible aspect you can. As you are writing about ancient times, it is important that you mention relevant historical facts where necessary. It is also important that you mention the era that you are talking about. Present every possible evidence to support your argument.

You will get good marks only if your purpose of writing is strong and you are putting your argument clearly. You can lose marks if your argument is oblique.

Methodology

In this chapter you will mention the method of research you have undertaken. You will give reasons for selecting this method and how it compliments with your question.

Conclusion/recommendations

Here you will give conclusions for your argument. The reader should agree to your point of view, and he should feel that a strong conclusion is being approached.

Bibliography

This section consists of all the resources that you have used to refer. This list serves as the proof that you have collected information from reliable sources. The reader can easily refer these sites for further reference.

Thesis writing can be very difficult if you do not get the right help. There are simple things that you should remember in order to achieve good grades in your paper.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/education-articles/the-formula-to-write-a-history-dissertation-for-your-masters-degree.htm - Article Side

Donna Santos - About Author:
Donna Santos is a senior research writer and provides help for a to write a history dissertation and a history dissertation introduction.Feel free to contact for any sort of help in this regard.

Article Keywords:
to write a history dissertation, history dissertation introduction

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!