The growth of the internet and the marriage of technology and higher education have expanded the opportunities available to the prospective MBA student. Although online programs are geared towards convenience and ease a significant part of the educational experience may be lost from not havenâ€™t direct contact with professor and a classroom of other students.

Interactions are limited to chat rooms , emails, and phone calls between students and professors, However, in this way the student can benefit from the insights of others â€œclassmatesâ€• from around the world, all in all, the prospective Distance Learning or Online MBA student must be organized and disciplined, and will have to excel at online presentations and Internet research.

The first regionally accredited online MBA program. President of this virtual university says that those students who opt for this type of degree program are highly motivated and self-directed. Since GMAT scores are not required and interviews are not granted, admission to the program weighs heavily on a requisite writing sample. Some students don not take the writing sample seriously, and this is a big mistake. Itâ€™s the universityâ€™s predominant mean of ensuring the quality of the student body, Typical of all online degree students.

This type of programs might be ideal for students who cannot be pinned down for scheduled classes or says, who do a great deal of business traveling. Distance learning and online programs assume that students can relate what they learn within their organizations- an attribute which makes it very attractive for companies who decide to sponsor their employees,

Over the past few decades, the master of business administration- otherwise known at the MBA has become the most visible and popular of graduate degrees, with it comes a certain amount of clout and prestige that is unparalleled .the numbers of programs and graduates are proliferating all around the world.

In both the business press and more popular media, the behavior and career prospects of MBA are repeatedly described, analyzed, and stereotyped.

The global selection process for admission to the MBA programs has developed a life of its own, producing hundreds of thousands of GMAT examination every years, numerous guides and publications, a world wide recruiting network of admissions forums, and sophisticated ranking systems designed to provide information to prospective consumers of MBA education.

Yet all this media hype has also produced negative publicity. Its necessary to cut through the marketing and media hype to understand a few things about the multifaceted, evolving phenomenon we call online education in india. The fact is that the MBA remains a very good investment for most business careers. For some careers- for example, investment is banking or management consulting. It is virtually a prerequisite.
