Article published on January 2nd 2012 | Education

Tsunami is a name of a disaster consisting of a series of water waves that is caused by the large upheavals in the water, to write a tsunami essay you will have to conduct a brief research about the term. Tsunami essays are very frequently assigned to the students in order to test their knowledge and analytical skills.

By and large, tsunami essays topics are already assigned to the students related to a particular area because it has occurred in various regions of the world. Therefore, students find it difficult to write especially when it comes to writing a thesis statement. Developing a thesis statement for tsunami essay is the most common problem where a student gets stuck; therefore we are providing you with some thesis statement ideas for writing essay on tsunami easily.

Tsunami essays are given in various forms, such as analytical, expository, argumentative etc so we will be giving thesis statement ideas for all of them.

Thesis statement example for analytical essay:

The topic would be Indian Ocean tsunami of 2004, as it is an analytical essay, we have to develop a thesis statement that would be give way to analytics in the body of the essay, for example;

â€œThe Indian ocean Tsunami resulted in the catastrophic change in the history of the world where almost one million people were killed and which discharged energy equivalent to the Atom bomb in Hiroshimaâ€•

Thesis statement example for expository essays:

Expository essays are much similar to that of explanatory essays in which a writer has to disclose each and everything about a particular concept, therefore, the thesis statement of expository essays should be something that introduces a concept, topic or theme that will be discussed in detail in the later part of the essay. Following is the thesis statement example for expository essay on the topic of Java earthquake resulted in Tsunami.

â€œTsunami that resulted from the 2006 Java earthquake killed more than six hundred people, whereas; the earthquake destroyed sixty five precious livesâ€•

Thesis statement example for argumentative essays:

Argumentative or persuasive essays deal with persuasion techniques to force a reader to believe on a particular stance. Argumentative essays involve loads of arguments that are mostly not based on facts; therefore, the thesis statement should be somewhat argumentative in nature as well. Following is an example of a thesis statement on the topic of 2004 Tsunami argumentative in nature.

â€œ2004 Tsunami is the name of a great disaster to the world that destroyed many precious lives in seconds; this forced the big powers to develop a Tsunami alarming systemâ€•

Hence, the above told thesis statement examples are just the rough ones in order to get you some ideas on developing thesis statement for different kinds of essay on Tsunami. There are many types of essays left that are not mentioned above but the preceding ones are the common ones that are very frequent is colleges and universities. Thus, read and utilize the ideas in your tsunami essays and get good grades in your essay exams.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/education-articles/three-thesis-statement-ideas-for-tsunami-essays.htm - Article Side

Samcollier - About Author:
Sam Collier is a senior research writer and provide help for a tsunami essays and a essay on tsunami.Feel free to contact for any sort of help in this regard.

Article Keywords:
tsunami essay, tsunami essays, essay on tsunami

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!