Article published on February 4th 2012 | Education

Children should find their own way with their own experiences in determining what they are interested in. Just as it takes one perfect wave hanging ten for a surfer to be born, it only takes one bad wave to turn a child off from the water forever. Baker explains that in our community there are several surf camps with proven track records for not only teaching children how to surf in an environment that is safe and encouraging, but that model the importance of being stewards for our water and coastal community. Baker laughs as he adds, "Teaching your child to surf is like opening a can of worms. Once they are hooked, they are hooked for life."

A Teenâ€™s Perspective

10. You know that you have arrived at Surf Camp when you see junk food being rolled into cabins on a skateboard.

9. Soon you get to meet people from all over the country who you will be your main competition for showers, the front seat on the bus, and of course, those who you will bond with and chat with while waiting for the wavesâ€¦or missing them all together.

8. Everyone gets rashâ€¦ everyone walks funny, and everyone gets to go home with their very own war wounds and smelling like baby- butt cream. Itâ€™s all part of the experience.

7. Trading in your make up for Zinc. It is a great way to pick up hotties on the beach.

6. When you go out for your first couple sessions, you get pushed into wavesâ€¦. You canâ€™t get better service than that.

5. Food. After a long day of surfing everyone is ready to eat. Whether your instructor is attempting to cook over a grill in Hatteras, or you go to Mellow Mushroom in Wilmington, you are sure to have a great meal made with love. Youâ€™ll even start to meet more of your instructors; itâ€™s pretty funny to se how many magically appear at your dinner table.

4. Typically buses arenâ€™t my thing. That was until I went to Surf Camp. The bus rides are full of sandy kids, great music, and prayers that your bus gets back first for the showers.

3. The instructors at Surf Camp are down to earth people that are great at what they do because they love their job. It also doesnâ€™t hurt that they are slightly good looking

2. When you finally catch your own wave

1. When you finally catch your own wave, and they got it on camera.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/education-articles/top-ten-reasons-katie-loves-surf-camp.htm - Article Side

Rick Civelli - About Author:
WB Surf Camp is a well known surf camp website we are providing a surf school around the world for all ages and all levels. Learn more: WB Surf Camp especially enjoy spending summer camp to Surf and exploring global surf destinations. We specialize in a Surfing Lessons where you will learn how to surf the right way in any one of our warm water locations

Article Keywords:
Surfing Lessons, Surf School, Surfing Schools, Surfing School, Learn to Surf, Teen Camps, Teen Summer Camp

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!