Though, known as the “Golden Days”, but academic days are the real foes of the kids. For parents and teachers it becomes difficult to figure out whether students can understand everything that is being taught in the classrooms when teachers deliver their lectures and finish their units one by one. There are many students who nod their heads but their conceptions about the subjects are not clear. Those lectures ultimately go in vein.

The latest teaching methods of interactive classes are fruitful in every sense. It gives opportunity to both the teacher and the student to interact openly with each other. It also helps the teachers to understand if the students have grabbed their lectures properly or not. Interactive classes keep both the teachers and the students energetic all through the period. Even the introduction of computers has also made the journey of school life for the students much easier. Students can finish their assignments in a faster rate than earlier and there are also less chances of making mistakes as computers find it out.

However, this has a negative consequence as well because students are more reliant on search engines rather than consulting books because it is quite feasible to get everything from Internet. In fact, Schools themselves ask their students to take help of the internet to fetch out materials. Like everything has advantages as well as disadvantages, Internet helps students to gather ample ideas about, not only their topic of study but also about the whole world.

The new teaching method in schools helps the students to get interest in their studies. Earlier, students were not used to be very attentive in the classes because all of them did not use to get attention from the teachers, and it is not even feasible for the faculty members to look after each and every student in the class. But interactive classes help the students to come forward and clear their doubts about the subject of their study. Moreover, it is a fact that from discussions a person can know many more things which earlier was not clear or unknown for that person.
