What Can Be More Interesting Than Making Education As a Career by Osawebmastersix

Article published on November 30th 2011 | Education

Why is it that people donâ€™t want to be a teacher anymore? Everybody wants to get education from the best teachers but nobody wants to be like them. These days many new occupations have come into existence and also became popular over the years. Unlike earlier days, the taste of people for selecting their career has changed. Everybody wishes to be a scientist, doctor, engineer, etc.

Choosing a career path has become really challenging and interesting because it gives rise to our potential to work under pressure and improve our capability. Career education includes the growth of knowledge, skills and attitudes through a designed program of learning experiences in education and training settings. It also helps students to make decisions about their study or work options and gives them the encouragement to take part well in career life. Career education should be intentional, developmental and inclusive. The best way to start is a self-assessment that is focused on interests and talents. To check whether you are ready for it or not ask yourself these questions and test yourself first:

Do you have an urge of learning that often makes you collect information of anything and everything?

Do you get pleasure from dealing with children and young adults?

Do you receive great satisfaction by teaching others new things?

Do you find yourself good in oral and written communication skills?

Do you enjoy when you successfully make somebody learn something?

Do you want to make any changes in this world with the weapon called education?

If you find your answers to be yes for most of the questions then you can try your hands in the field of education to bring a change in the world and minds of the people. Good educators contribute the most to a country in terms of the development of any country. Not every person can be a good teacher or educator. Only few of them have the ability to make the studentsâ€™ concept clear and teach them well about anything and everything. Only one way teaching doesnâ€™t help really, until and unless you get the response of the children.

Teachers should not take a student only an object that they can give lectures for hours and hours; rather they should take them as a consumer of knowledge. Over the years, like everything else, the role of the teachers has also changed, and the change has brought many positive results. Even teachers have also found out the way to make classroom interesting so that the lectures bring something really worthwhile.
