

Article Side

Who is an Accountant? by Harish Makkar

Article published on May 30th 2012 | Education

An accountant is an individual who performs accounting tasks for individuals or companies.

It generally includes financial records, taxes, and responsibility for the issuing of financial reports. Requirements to become an accountant may vary, but generally include certification through a professional agency in accounting and finance.

In a small firm, an accountant may be responsible for keeping all financial records. These records include payroll information, accounts payable, accounts receivable, retail sales, and information regarding investments held by the company. These accounts are kept organized in ledgers which are used to assess the financial health of a company. Ledgers are always kept up to date, may be consulted and high ranking members of a company when they are making major business decisions.

In larger firms, accountants also perform internal audits, to ensure that the financial records of the company are accurate.

In most cases, an accountant will choose to specialize in a particular field such as audits, bookkeeping, taxes. In other instances, an accountant may be certified public accountant who handles the books for several small businesses at once. In both instances, the accountant must have strong math skills, as well as an education in accounting.

Most accountants and Auditors work in a typical office setting. Some may be able to do part of their work at home. An organization with multiple locations may travel frequently to perform audits at branches, clients' places of business, or government facilities.

What you can become by pursuing the course:

An accountant generally works in following major fields-

1. As public accountant: People who work as public accountants with several different clients on their accounting needs. You might work with these clients on your own as a consultant.
2. Second, you can work with a firm that provides accountancy services to the public.
3. Another career prospect that you have in accountancy is a private accountant. These kinds of accountants work with a corporation as a cost accountant or junior internal auditors.
4. A government accountant is another career prospect that you may have with a career in accountancy. With this position, you work in various government branches like the internal revenue service or department of defense.
5. Another prospect for a career in accountancy is an internal auditor. In this position, you will be conducting audits to ensure compliance with accounting laws and working to make sure that accounting information systems are up to standard.

How to Become an Accountant:

Successful accountants need to possess a special aptitude for numbers and a close attention to detail. They must also have excellent computer skills and be adept at oral and written communication. This is career in which education and constant accuracy are of utmost importance.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/education-articles/who-is-an-accountant.htm> - Article Side

Harish Makkar - About Author:

Harish Makkar owns a site that offers many career options on Accounting & Finance Professional Courses. To know more about a Career in Accounts and a Accounting Courses in Ludhiana visit iifajobtraining.org

Article Keywords:

Career in Accounting, Accountant Jobs, Accounting Software, Accounts Courses in Ludhiana

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!