A Brief Guide to Home Care Assistance in NY by David Jhons

Article published on May 10th 2012 | Family

When you see the term "home care assistance in NY", do you understand what it means? A lot of people automatically leap to the conclusion that home care assistance in NY is mostly about cleaning and cooking, but that is a serious misconception.

When you work with professional home care assistance in NY you can expect all of the things summarized in the title - you get care and help (assistance) in the home. Because it is a service most often provided by an agency of licensed medical professionals it means that you can anticipate much more than just some very useful services such as help with shopping, housekeeping and cooking.

For instance, the standard list of options through the top-rated providers of home care assistance in NY will include hourly or live in services. This means that you could be an adult who has a parent with a condition like dementia or Alzheimer's and pay someone to stay in your home all of the time or while you are at work. You could be someone who has an elderly parent or relation with severe diabetes and you could hire assistance to come in each day and ensure that the person is in good health as well.

The finest services also include all of the housekeeping mentioned, but go well beyond them. They will help with bathing, dressing, feeding, and mobility. They can transfer someone from a bed to a wheelchair, and provide evening "tuck in" services that get them tidied up and back into bed for the night. The services can be used to get a patient out for their errands and to medical appointments, but it can also be a hospice service too.

As you can see, when you choose a licensed agency, you can anticipate a tremendous amount of flexibility and a lot of options. This is a very important thing to consider because you have to accept that no one's life remains "static" or in the same place forever. So, the person who needs to hire help with feeding and mobility today is likely to need more expanded services in the future. Rather than having to go through the entire hiring process and retraining someone new, it is best to do a bit of work and to find a service that is more than happy to work with a client to give them all of the assistance needed regardless of how encompassing it might become.
