

Article published on June 27th 2012 | Family

There are many parents who constantly yell at their children. It doesn't seem to matter where they are, be it the grocery store or even outside of a church. They simply start yelling at their kids as a form of correcting unwanted behavior.

Some parents simply don't understand the old adage that you catch more flies with honey than you do with vinegar. By following these easy tips, you will see that parenting kids without yelling is not only positive but very effective as well.

Talk to Your Children

All too many people have forgotten that children are just little people. They tend to talk at their kids instead of talking to them. The art of communication should not be lost, especially with children.

Kids learn proper communication skills from their parents at a young age. By talking with your children, you will be strengthening your parent child relationship as well as laying the foundation for a close bond that will last a lifetime.

Keep Your Cool

One of the most important things you need to remember when you are parenting children is that you must always keep your cool. Oftentimes, it is harder for working parents to stay calm when parenting kids. The stresses of their jobs and other responsibilities tend to cause them to lose their tempers more easily than stay at home parents. If you talk to your kids rather than yell at them, they will learn not to yell through your examples.

It's Natural to Nurture

Children who have nurturing and loving parents tend to be able to express themselves in a quieter tone than children with less than strong child parent bonding. You should spend some quality time with each of your children. You can ask them about school, their playmates and their teachers. These quite chats open up the lines of communication which will enable your kids to talk with you when they are angry, upset or worried about something. You can watch inspirational videos together or read children quotes.

Speaking with your kids often will teach them to communicate quietly and without yelling and ranting and raving.

Finding the Right Friends

Different people have different ways of parenting children. It would be best if your children had friends whose parents have similar parenting skills. Kids who are permitted to yell at adults and be disrespectful should be erased from your children's friend list.

You will need to tell your children why they can no longer play with Suzie or Tommy. They should also be told that you don't approve of the friend's behavior. This will help the children understand that you feel it is necessary kids treat everyone with manners and respect.

Practice What You Preach

When you are trying to teach your children to be able to communicate their feelings without yelling, you need to be a demonstrative teacher. If a parent yells at their children, they are simply showing them that yelling is an acceptable behavior.

The kids will then mimic their parent's behavior and believe that yelling is fine. Parent Child bonding could be severely damaged when the parent is incapable of speaking and consistently yells at his or her children.

Pay the Piper

It is of the utmost importance that your kids know the penalty for yelling or being disrespectful. You can simply make something up and carry through on a punishment without the child knowing the consequences in advance.

Working parents tend to have these guidelines set because the children are often in the care of others so they are aware of the punishments. Parenting children who have a clear understanding of the rules and penalties usually behave well and have better relationship with their parents as well as healthy friendships and love relationships later in life.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/family-articles/parenting-children-without-yelling.htm> - Article Side

Noah B Brown - About Author:

Noah Brown is a freelance writer who writes extensively about a inspirational videos which offer advice on a parenting children. He has written several enlightening parenting articles on inspirational children quotes and motivational videos which offer parenting tips for parents.

Article Keywords:

parenting children, inspirational videos, children quotes

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!