How to Choose the Right Sunglasses Based on Your Facial Structure by Angelina Parker

Article published on January 6th 2012 | Fashion

No matter how fashionable you are, your wardrobe is never complete without a pair of trendy and stylish sunglasses. However, the task of choosing the right eyewear is not an easy task as there are plenty of options available in the market. Before you make a purchase, you need to decide which one is most suitable based on your facial structure. Remember, choosing the wrong frame is not just wastage of money but will affect your look as well. So, when it comes to choosing the right pair of sunglasses, Houston residents always prefer buying frames based on their facial structure.

The following tips will help you sail through the process of choosing the right pair of sunglasses without wasting much time:

Round shaped face: This is a common face shape that we see around us every now and then. The owners of this type of facial structure should choose eyeglasses that will make the face look longer. For example, if you have a round shaped face, then a rectangular or a narrow angular frame can do wonders for you. Try to avoid frames that have a lot of designs at the edges.

Oval shaped face: People those who have this type of face have a fine proportion in their facial structure. This is why they can wear almost all types of eyewear. Houston is a place there are a lot of companies available trying to sell wrong products to people just to earn money. Don't fall into their trap and choose frames that have lots of depth. The key rule is, the frame of the eyeglasses should be wider than the widest part of your facial structure.

Square shaped face: If your face is equal in width and length, and you have a broad forehead, then you are the owner of a square shaped face. Moreover, raised cheekbones and strong jawline also indicates that you have a face that is square in shape. You should choose oval or round frame eyeglasses to cut down the angularity of your facial structure. However, you must remember that square shaped and angular frames are not for you no matter how trendy or stylish they might look.

Triangular face: This type of facial structure has wider cheekbones and narrow forehead. You need to select a pair of eyeglasses that helps to widen the upper part of your face and narrow the chin. When you are going to make a purchase, go for the ones that are bright and contains a lot of designs and detailing. Choosing metal frames can be a wise decision as well.

So, now you know some of the most important things to look for if you want to buy sunglasses in Houston. It is one of those cities where you will find a lot of companies offering sunglasses at affordable prices. To choose the right one always consider the tips mentioned above.
