Outsourcing debt settlement is the best solution by John Taylor

Article published on December 26th 2011 | Finance

If you are in the business of marketing debt resolution services, you should consider outsourcing debt settlement to one of the premier backend Debt settlement firms in the USA. These companies provide excellent client service, so that you can spend your time on expanding your business. The debt settlement companies act on behalf of debtors and help them in clearing their debts. This is done by entering into direct negotiations with the creditors in order to enable the debt repayment. Once you sign up for the company's attorney supported debt settlement affiliate program you become one of the affiliates and thereafter you will be eligible for services from your backend office.

One of the important backend debt settlement services is that of the "call shield". The "call shield" has been programmed by one of the attorneys with the debt settlement company. This service will automatically redirect all collection calls that you may receive to your backend office. This is a great stress-reliever and you need never speak to any collector throughout the period of the program. The backend office also provides the clients with educational materials. These materials are in the form of textbooks, software and newsletters. The newsletters serve to update you on all the activities of the company. The resources serve to guide those of your clients that want to eliminate the debt burden. The other debt settlement services include free coaching concerning credit restoration to all the clients. Debts as low as $5000 are acceptable as are all un-secured and non-government debts. Highest commission is paid to all the debt settlement affiliates. Some companies offer on site training by certified trainers. There are reviews carried out weekly to note areas of improvement as well as conduct of quality audits by the staff.

The best companies dealing with debt settlement in USA have well trained staff as well as an Account Executive that will be dedicated to your account. Customer service is available round the clock with above par customer retention rate. Often a CRM tool such as Turbo DS will be used for sales tracking. An extensive reporting system will help you keep a track of your business.
