International Fast Food Restaurants - an Overview by Stuart Owens

Article published on December 27th 2011 | Food

Restaurants have become a major source of income in today's world. Every city in the world has international restaurants which provide high class service. People from the corporate world go to these restaurants with their family and friends. Large franchises of these restaurants are opened in different parts of the world. Each of these has their methods and significance in providing service to their customers. There can be a lot of reasons why these franchises have to be set up in different parts of the globe. Firstly, the main reason is to expand the business and create a brand of its own.

Today, we see a lot of outlets from United States being open in different parts of the globe. Some of the fast food companies like the McDonalds, Subway and Burger King have reached a saturation point in terms of their business in USA. Opening new outlets in different parts of the world have helped them expand their business, share their best practices and managing these franchises across numerous locations. It is also likely to engender a part of growth-minded franchises to venture with new franchises into different parts of the world.

Today, we find these international restaurants providing food from different nationalities in almost every city. The international restaurant in Ohio, Columbus provides different varieties of food from various nationalities like Mexican, Asian, Central European, Chinese, Japanese, Chinese Oriental, Ethiopian, French, German, Greek, Indian, Irish, Italian, Korean, Latin American, Mediterranean, Mexican, Mongolian, Spanish, Thai, Vietnamese and Thai. Some of these restaurants providing these are Don Poblo, Estrada,Yoshi's Japanese Restaurants, Martini Ristorante, Indian Kitchen, The Olive Tree, China Garden Buffett, Human Lion, Bento's, Hanke's Cuisine, The Bombay Grille, Bd's Mongolian Barbecue, Sweet Pot Jamaican Cuisine, Fujiyama Steak House of Japan, The Refectory, Blue Nile and so on.

Today, we have a lot of international restaurants in the district of Seattle, Washington. This place was once called the China Town as it had a lot of Chinese restaurants and was famous for Chinese varieties. Most of the culture here represents the Korean and Thai, dominant cuisines of the Chinese, Japanese and the Vietnamese. Let's look into the details of some of this kind.

The Chinese restaurants most commonly had Szechuan, Cantonese and Hunan dishes on the same menu. However, the international district also had independent cuisines which in depth had varieties in its area of specialization. For example, The Sichuanese Cuisine Restaurant uses peppers in dishes and is open every day. The Pacific CafÃ© offers traditional Hong Kong style of fast food and an a la carte menu. It provides a full course meal and is open on all days except Monday.

Most of the restaurants specialize themselves in dim sim. They also serve traditional Chinese food for lunch and dinner. Jade Garden is one of the restaurants here which specializes in dim sim. It is opened on all days and offers traditional items like steamed buns, shrimp balls along with other exotic items.

Sushi is a staple food in most of the Japanese cuisines and a lot of restaurants specialize in this. However, the international district of Seattle boasts much more varieties. Maneki Japanese Restaurant is supposed to be the oldest Japanese restaurant in Seattle. It serves a variety of home-style dishes, such as sukiyaki, as well as sushi for over a century. The Samurai Noodle serves the bowl of ramen. Here you will discover all the different broths and toppings that ramen comes with, and the taste of a traditional Japanese noodle shop is phenomenal.

These international restaurants keep a high surveillance on their security systems. Starting from valet parking, alarm systems, security cameras, digital video recorders installed in different places inside the restaurant helps them to keep their customers secure and high quality service. For better understanding, most often these systems work like the ADT Home Security system installed in our homes.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/food-articles/international-fast-food-restaurants-an-overview.htm - Article Side

Stuart Owens - About Author:
Stuart a freelance content writer has written articles on fast food restaurant security earlier. Restaurants these days are well protected with high profile security systems that works like a ADT Home Security installed at houses.

Article Keywords:
Restaurants, ADT Home Security, Security Systems

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!