A hen party is a night of getting together to celebrate the last days of freedom for the bride-to â€“be and is usually arranged by one of her close friends or one of the bridesmaids. There are many different kinds of such parties and they can have a specific theme or just be a meal and entertainment. Many people like to have something a little different for such a celebration.

This has led to the uprise of special henâ€™s night packages offered by people who are good at arranging things. So if organising is not your forte and the task fall to you to arrange a hensâ€™ night for your friend, you can always take advantage of such packages. However, before you start to panic, just realise that this is a gathering of friends who all wish the bride well and have come together to tell her so.

You can make such a gathering as simple or as complicated as you like. In fact, one of the latest trends is to extend the party for a whole weekend rather than just a night. Another trend is to have a luncheon gathering rather than a night celebration. However you choose to arrange this celebration, the thing that counts is the fun you will have and the sincerity of all participants.

One thing that all such parties or celebrations need is a great venue. Very often a bar and lounge is a great idea because everything is on hand for the party. That is, the drinks â€“ which form an important part of any gathering - are convenient to get and if you run out you can easily get more. In addition, most such places cater to a crowd and have plenty of seating and room for entertainment â€“ something that cannot always be said for a home.

Some henâ€™s night out functions are arranged for a home swimming pool, but this will depend a lot on the weather. Your hens night out may have to be in the cooler time of year, or maybe you just donâ€™t trust the weather not to rain on your parade. However, it can be an easy way to arrange a private function.

Most people choose to have their celebration indoors so that the weather will not matter and everything can be arranged for comfort and ease. And if you have arranged for some kind of entertainment then such necessary components as the lighting and sound are all on tap ready to be used.
