Preparation of classic Martini- the Process by James

Article published on February 29th 2012 | Food

Martini is regarded as the best known cocktails in the world and has been immortalized by popular and eminent individuals like James Bond, Frank Sinatra and Winston Churchill. These days, half of the dirty martini olive juice that is prepared in the bar tend to use Vodka and not gin that is totally excluded of vermouth and are shaken such as hell rather than have it stirred and most part of the flavor is credited to the martini olive juice. Vodka is considered to be a spirit that is flavorless and the martini olive juice tastes like olive juice.

Tasting martini olive juice

If you have plans to taste martini and understand what it is like then you are recommended to use a gin and solid vermouth such as Noilly Prat. The Vermouth tends to balance the gin out and is regarded important for increasing the drinkâ€™s flavor profile. Some like to use 3 parts of the gin to 1 part of the vermouth. Orange bitters are another classic edition, but less known. It would be great if you add 2 dashes of the Reganâ€™s *6, Fee Brothers or Angostura Orange to have a nice orange touch, which would blend perfectly among the various other ingredients.

Ingredients

The Ingredients of dirty martini olive juice are as follows:

Three parts of gin

One part of dry vermouth

Two dashes of orange bitters

Directions to prepare martini olive juice

You are advised to stir continuously and not shake it. Cocktails that are prepared with all the spirits are subject to get stirred. The ingredients are to be stirred with ice till they become cold. Then you need to strain it in a chilled glass of cocktail. Then the olives are to be skipped and a lemon strip twisted on the top for releasing its oils and you are sure to enjoy the lovely martini olive juice recipe.
