Laser Tag games are group games where participants have to tag or mark each other. The game is played with infrared mounted guns and the laser tags on the clothes have to be hit. Although it is predominantly an outdoor game, it also has some indoor versions. It is a combat game and does involve a degree of expertise if one is to play at the most difficult levels. More or less, it can be compared to the paintball, but here there are no physical objects like paintball shells flying. Instead, one has to play with laser mounted guns. And the indoor versions are a lot less physically demanding.

Technology plays a vital role in the laser tag game. The equipments mounted with laser guns and the laser tags on the clothes are specifically built. Various kinds of scenarios are also built to replicate a terrain over which the contestants have to use their skill and out do each otherâ€™s team. The rate can be anything between a few hundred dollars to two thousand dollars, depending upon the number of people you are booking the ground for. The guns are very light and appropriate clothing makes the game a very safe one. In some places, smaller and lighter equipments are also kept for the children in the family.

It can be said that the laser tag is a great team building game. Many corporate offices too book entire venues for their outings. For stag and hen parties as well, this is becoming popular as much as the paintballs. Indulging in a day of laser tag also gives the body a lot of exercise and is a definite way of having entertainment.
