Many UK homeowners make the decision to invest in a bespoke fitted kitchen every year â€“ and with good reason. Along with the likes of loft conversions and bespoke bathrooms, a custom built kitchen consisting of specially designed cabinets, worktops and other accessories is one of the most popular forms of home improvement. There are all sorts of things which need to be considered if you are choosing what type of bespoke fitted kitchen you want. Here are just a few things which should be at the forefront of your mind:

As with the likes of bespoke bathrooms, when it comes to a bespoke fitted kitchen you should firstly decide where you want all the built-in fittings. Ovens and hobs are major considerations which have a substantial impact on the feel of your room; a range cooker can give a rustic vibe whereas contemporary minimalist alternatives look sleek.

Any bespoke fitted kitchen needs worktops. Solid granite or marble is robust as well as attractive but many homeowners prefer laminated counters consisting of wood and acrylic. The choice of worktops needs to match your cabinets. The beauty of a bespoke fitted kitchen is that you get the right number of cabinets to suit your own individual kitchen. You can go for glass units or painted or varnished wooden cabinets.

White goods are an integral part of any given bespoke fitted kitchen. There needs to be space for refrigerator and freezer units and smaller electrical appliances like kettles and toasters also need a place.

A genuine bespoke fitted kitchen should also include all sorts of other accoutrements. Everything from blinds or curtains down to drying racks and chopping boards shapes your design so remember the small details.

Where can I find a truly stunning bespoke fitted kitchen for my home?

A bespoke fitted kitchen, like other home improvements including bespoke bathrooms, is something that you would rather was installed by a fully trained professional. One company with an excellent reputation within the industry can be found by visiting Interiordesignbureau.co.uk.
