

Article Side

Discovery Eradication and Prevention of Bed Bugs by Harry Ross

Article published on February 28th 2012 | Gardening

If you find yourself waking up in the morning with itchy bites on your body that were not there when you went to sleep, the answer just may be bed bugs. Some people think (and hope) that it is impossible to get bed bugs. Why? Because their house is tidy, neat, and 100% clean. But no matter how clean a house may be bed bugs can still sneak in.

If you've returned from a trip, they may have decided to catch a ride on your luggage. A simple matter of running errands may mean a bedbug hops onto clothing or something you're carrying and comes all the way home with you. There's no need to panic if you discover bed bugs – it happens and it can be dealt with.

Looking with the naked eye, you may not see any bed bugs at all. That does not mean that they are not there. Bed bugs are masters of hiding. They are usually active at night – which is why people get bitten as they sleep. Bed bugs aren't restricted to hiding only in mattresses and sheets either. They've been known to hide in pieces of furniture, floors, and even behind picture frames and wallpaper!

The bites should be enough evidence for you to call an exterminator in NJ right away. Likewise, you may also notice rust-colored spots on your mattress. Bed bugs can spread rapidly, so the quicker you get help, the faster your problem will go away. Different exterminators have various ways on how to detect and how to kill bed bugs. Some of the most accurate methods of discovering them can also be the most surprising.

Canine bed bug detection is an extremely effective way of detecting bed bugs. Dogs have a highly trained sense of smell, and they can scent out bed bugs in a matter of minutes as opposed to a human doing the work with their eyes alone.

Once it has been determined that there are bed bugs in the residence, it will be time to kill them. There are a wide range of options here as well, and depending upon how heavy the infestation is, the number of treatments used can vary. There may be only one or two steps needed to completely eliminate the problem, or a comprehensive program may need to be drawn up. The goal is to exterminate all of the bed bugs – removing only a few and leaving some in the walls or rugs will do no good. Luckily green pest control is becoming more and more popular, so you can feel more confident about the treatments used and how they relate to your family and pets.

Some people may wonder how to keep bed bugs from coming back once they are gone. Keeping clean does indeed help keep them at bay, but they are resourceful little hitchhikers. Most people can go all their lives and never experience a bedbug problem. Don't worry about it too much and the moment you notice something, contact New Jersey bed bug control. If you're still concerned, ask them how you can keep the bed bugs from biting.

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/gardening-articles/discovery-eradication-and-prevention-of-bed-bugs.htm>
- Article Side

Harry Ross - About Author:

Article Source: a Ross Environmental Solutions

Article Keywords:

bed bugs, wallpaper, Canine bed bug detection, New Jersey bed bug control

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!