If you are like most people, you only think about pest control when you have some type of pest problem, but the reality is that just because you may not see a problem does not mean one that one isnâ€™t there. You could have pest problems brewing in your home right now without your knowledge. Do you really want to take the chance that your home is about to be invaded by ants, roaches, rodents, or some other pest that is so common in Florida? Brevard County pest control options often offer total pest control services, giving you the choice to have continuous care throughout the year, and if youâ€™re looking to keep pests out of your home, a service plan is your best bet.

A Better Approach

In most cases, calling a Brevard County pest control company for a one-time application of this or that once you notice a problem will immediately take care of things, but what protects you against a re-infestation down the road? Many of even the best pest control products on the market today are only designed to last three months, and that could leave you susceptible to problems down the road. If you move forward with an ongoing maintenance program, youâ€™ll get continuous pest control, and it may save you quite a bit of cash in the long run.

Most total pest control programs offer you a preset service schedule as well as regularly monthly or bi-monthly inspections for certain pests. In some cases, you even get a transferrable warranty in the event you sell your home.

Many companies these days even offer green services in a total pest control plan. An environmentally responsible choice, these pest control companies use low or no impact materials to make certain you donâ€™t have to deal with pest problems month after month.

While the kinds of problems total pest control programs address can vary, most will deal with common issues like ants, rodents, spiders, and roaches. Some will even go so far as to include termites and bed bugs in that list, but itâ€™s essential that you ask what services are covered and which ones are extra as you try to decide on a pest control plan to meet your needs.

Read the Fine Print

Keep in mind that the details for pest control service plans like these often vary by provider, so you need to look the service over carefully before you sign up. In some cases, you can enroll in a plan like this without a 12 month contract. In others, youâ€™ll need to sign the contract to make certain your home is protected. While the terms themselves donâ€™t really matter, as you need total pest control protection any way you cut it, you should be aware of your responsibilities before you sign on any dotted line.

With so many pest problems in Brevard County pest control service options like an ongoing plan are an absolute must. Finding one, like those Slug-A-Bug offers, can keep your home pest free throughout the year.
