India is considered as one of the largest computer accessory producing country and its products are trustworthy and reliable. India exports some of the computer accessories such as Hard disk case, speaker and UPS to its partner countries. These accessories are the vital part of computer and have the following properties such as:

Hard Disk case: Hard drive cases are specially designed body to hold a hard drive and to protect it. They are generally made to hold portable hard disks of every size. They have water resistant body and some of them need not require removing hard drive from it as they have specially build USB ports designed on them which match mouth to mouth of portable hard disks USB ports. With protection they look beautiful to carry and fits easily in back pocket.

Speaker: Everybody likes to hear songs and watch videos as they entertain us a lot. Most of us love to hear songs while working on computer thus speaker is considered as one of the most important accessory, generally speakers are a sort of computer accessories in India and when major companies in computer field realized it that people love quality of music, they introduced real great speakers with some of them being of home theatre quality. Later then after experiencing good response they were included in computers basic accessories and some good companies like creative, iball and intex now exports its speaker to various countries. Now days to provide you complete theatre experience while watching movie or any video 5.1 channel home theatre speakers are also out in the market.

UPS (uninterrupted power supply): everybody now days at home prefers UPS to get clean and consistent power supply to keep computer safe and have a long life of its components. In India sometimes, we are all familiar with low power or light dim and full power more than required outrages also. Thus these power fluctuations are a dirt source of energy which spoils computer components and sometimes such fluctuations results total destruction of components which prove a lot costlier. Thus UPS comes in handy, as it handles the power fluctuations and provides much clean and adequate electricity for components to work. Itâ€™s also useful to provide battery backup of up to 30 minutes, so if you are working on some applications or document you get the ample amount of time to save your progress and then quit later.
