Instead of replacing HP Inkjet Cartridges, which costs more, it can be refilled thereby saving a lot of money and reducing wastage.Since HP has various kinds of cartridges, the actual method of refilling will differ from one cartridge to another.Even though there are some fundamental similarities, the following points can be followed:

Ensure that the surface in which you fill the cartridge is safe to possibly spill on.Cover the surface with old rags or paper towels that do not mind getting toner on.

For inserting fresh ink into the cartridge, non-surgical clean syringe should be used and if the user has an inkjet refill system, it can also be used.

Then, the filling hole of the cartridge should be located and it might be seen on the bottom or top sealed with a plastic film covering and a ball bearing.The covering should be removed with a penknife and the ball bearing should be pushed into the cartridge.

The appropriate color should be inserted into the cartridge, for black cartridge, 20 ml refilling would be wise, while for color cartridge, 10 ml per chamber would be appropriate.

If the filling hole is on the bottom, reseal the cartridge and ensure that everything is fine.Then, the sides of the cartridge should be squeezed and the plug that came along with the refill kit should be inserted.Ensure whether some ink drops from the print head.

Before putting the refilled ink and print cartridges back to the printer, it is better to let the cartridge stand with the print head facing down for some minutes since this process can equalize the pressure and can draw out the excessive ink in the cartridge.

To the good news of printer users, there are companies offering the facility of refilling of HP inkjet cartridges and ink and print cartridges through online in such a way that people can get the cartridges refilled right at the comfort of their homes without the requirement of physically visiting the stores for refilling their cartridges.They have a long list of satisfied customers not only with respect to refilling cartridges, but also with respect to purchase of new cartridges.

They ensure same day dispatch for cartridges ordered before 12 noon for people in and around Australia and they also offer 100% money back guarantee as well if the purchaser is not satisfied with the cartridges.
