What You Need to Know about Mail-in Laptop Screen Replacement and DC Jack Repair by Julia Bennet

Article published on December 7th 2011 | Hardware

The display screen and DC jack are two of the most vulnerable parts of a laptop. They can be damaged easily due to a number of factors. If the screen has been damaged, then it would be impossible for you to use your computer. A faulty jack, on the other hand, affects the power supply and prevents your laptop from charging properly. If you want to avoid computing problems, make sure to hire a reliable service center that specializes on laptop screen replacement and DC jack repair.

You should allow a trained professional to repair your laptopâ€™s screen. Laptop screen replacement is something that is very difficult to do, especially if you do not have advanced technical skills. A replacement is in order if the display screen has suffered from a serious damage. Dropping your laptop, improper handling, or putting excessive pressure are just some of the most common causes of cracked screens. Cracks can cause malfunction and you have no choice but to order a laptop screen replacement. The good news is that you can now mail-in a broken laptop to the repair center. This is a more convenient option and a good way to avoid the hassles of conventional computer repair.

Power jack damage is another big issue faced by many laptop users. The jack is directly connected to the motherboard by four small pins. If someone trips over the power cord while it is attached to the laptop, then the jack can be damaged. The sudden application of pressure could dislodge one of the four pins. If this happens, then your laptop will not charge properly. You may also experience sudden power supply failure which could affect other sensitive parts of your computer. To minimize computer problems, you should bring your laptop to the service center for proper DC jack repair. Again, you have to allow professional technicians to do the job for you. That is because DC jack repair can be tricky. A small mistake could damage the motherboard and other sensitive parts.

There are many reasons why you have to use mail-in laptop screen replacement and DC jack repair service. First of all, a trusted repair center can offer cheaper rates for you. You will be able to save money by using a mail-in tech repair company. Getting a fix for your laptop would be easy too if you use a mail-in service. All you need to do is to send the broken unit to the repair company by courier service. You will get a diagnostic report from the repair center and a full service quote. The best laptop screen repair service also provides full satisfaction guarantees for you.

So there is no need to worry too much if you have a broken LCD screen or a faulty power jack. A full service mail-in laptop repair company can quickly solve your problems. The best part is that this type of service offers cheap repair and fast turnaround. You will be able to get a good-as-new laptop within a couple of days.
