The Part I of the article covered various misconceptions concerning root canal therapy, below is the continuation in Part II.

In a recent survey done by a cosmetic dentistry clinic, seventy percent of New Yorkers responded by saying that it is important to have a flawless and beautiful smile. However, our lifestyles and eating habits take a toll on the teeth and leave it prone to various diseases. Decay and disease are some of the common reasons to lose the precious pearly whites. A Cosmetic Dentistry NYC specialist performs various dental procedures to salvage these damaged teeth.

Root canal therapy is one of these procedures for saving the teeth. There are many misconceptions concerning this procedure among people. In the section below, a Cosmetic Dentistry NYC specialist dispels myths concerning the root canal or endodontic therapy.

Myth: Root canal is a painful procedure

Truth: This has been a common misconception among people since years that root canal is a painful procedure. This procedure was painful in its developmental stages due to lack of proper techniques and pain management procedures. However with the modern cosmetic dentistry procedures offered today has made it a painless procedure. The use of sedatives and anesthesia along with the expertise of the cosmetic dentist has made this procedure comfortable.

Myth: A Root canal may result in illness

Truth: Dr Weston Price did an extensive research in the early nineties stating that the bacteria that find its way to the tooth/teeth during root canal treatment may result in various diseases. These diseases included that of the heart, kidney and arthritis to name a few. However, extensive research has been carried out for this claim but the results have shown that there is no relation between root canal and disease.

Myth: It is only needed when a person has discomfort or pain

Truth: Many people do not get timely treatment, as they resort to root canal only when the damage has been done. It is imperative to understand that the sooner one gets treatment, the better it is for the tooth/teeth. An individual does not have to wait for sharp pain or discomfort in order to seek treatment for a root canal.
