To have a child is one thing and getting a Botox Toronto is an altogether different thing. It is best if we do not try to intermingle both for our pleasure and play with it. It is true that after having a child a woman experiences a new self and even after getting a botox a woman feels a new and younger self. But there is a difference in both the transformation. In delivering a baby a girl becomes a woman and then getting a botox and wanting to become a girl again is not a food for thought.

The days when you are pregnant or are breastfeeding the child it is strictly not advisable to take any risks that involve your health and the health of your child. There are no proven scientific facts that what harm it causes to your body or for that matter to your child but then why to take risk when your newborn is involved. Botox is an optional cosmetic treatment and it should be done only if there is a need not just for the pleasure to get it done.

Botox if mentioned in general terms is not a risky thing to be done in general but in any medical practice there is always a small risk involved. A medical procedure is considered safe when the risks involved with them are very low and mild. The main and general problems that are involved with this procedure is at times there are drastic results for the botox that has been performed, so all the problems can be solved if an experienced surgeon is performing your botox. The results for botox are quite temporary so there are no major problems.

If botox is performed on a child that has cerebral palsy there may be chances that the child may suffer from some complications but nothing has been observed as yet but if the botox shots are given in small amounts then it may not be a cause for worry. So botox is a safe and effective method and it is an ideal procedure for those who have forehead lines and overactive facial muscles.

Where does this all leave us let us come to the beginning point as to is it harmful for the pregnant or the expecting mothers? There are no evidences to prove this fact but there are no evidences to neglect this fact as well. So why neglect the health of the mother as well as the child. Have a happy pregnancy and take care of the child Botox Toronto or Toronto Botox can be done when the mother if fit and fine.
