Haemorrhoids can be very painful and annoying for people who are suffering from them. Some people suffer from bleeding haemorrhoids accompanied with painful bowel movements, itching, and swelling. These problems can affect a personâ€™s normal life by interfering in his or her daily activities such as driving and sitting. Certain natural haemorrhoids treatment can help in providing relief from the symptoms as well as stopping the bleeding. Fortunately, due to the advancement of modern technologies several natural methods have been discovered that can help people treat their haemorrhoid problems. Following are certain natural methods that can treat haemorrhoids at the comfort of your place:

Grape seed oil- Grape seed oil or extract has been used since several years to treat the problem of bleeding haemorrhoids. Due to the essential nutrients present in this oil, it can be used as a salad dressing and baking. It also contains essential antioxidants, vitamins C and E and beta carotene. All these can sum up to reduce the inflammation and pain associated with bleeding haemorrhoids. This oil contains natural ingredients, so it can be considered as a safe topical medicine to treat bleeding haemorrhoids without any major side effects.

Apple cider vinegarâ€” Apple cider vinegar can be considered as a very effective and natural treatment for bleeding haemorrhoids. This liquid is prepared from apple must or cider and can be available at any leading health store nearby your place. It is advisable to consume this brownish liquid unfiltered. Due to its high acidic taste and nature, it is advisable to consume it after diluting it with water. A small dosage of apple cider vinegar after every meal can help you treat bleeding haemorrhoids and relieve pain. You can also apply the liquid as compress directly to the affected area to get instant relief. There are certain people who apply water mixed with apple cider vinegar by soaking the affected area in a basin.

Colloidal silver- Colloidal silver is an effective and strong antibiotic that can heal bleeding haemorrhoid. You can apply this medicine topically with a cotton ball soaked in it to the affected area in order to get quicker relief from inflammation of haemorrhoid. This medicine can be used to treat both internal and external haemorrhoids.

Yarrow- Yarrow is a natural astringent that can help in shrinking of haemorrhoids. It can also help in stopping the bleeding from the affected tissues. It can reduce the swelling and inflammation of the affected area. Due to its traditional use for stopping bleeding, this astringent is also known as nosebleed plant. The healing agents present in yarrow such as asparagine, salicylic acid, and flavonoids can help in relieving the haemorrhoidal inflammation. Like colloidal silver, yarrow can also be used both externally and internally to treat haemorrhoids.

Venapro- You can also take help of Venapro capsules to get an effective and faster relief from haemorrhoidal problems. This capsule can be taken orally to treat bleeding haemorrhoids without any major side effects. This capsule can also help in eliminating the haemorrhoids in a span of few weeks. In most cases, this capsule has given instant relief from the symptoms just after the first use.

You can also take the help of certain haemorrhoids cream to get faster and immediate relief from pain, swelling, and irritation.
