Stockings are not the most comfortable items to wear all the time, especially during the summer months, but they are an important part of our overall wardrobe. And some stockings have medicinal purposes too. For those suffering from blood circulation problems, compression stockings are great things to wear. And in the world of compression stockings, Jobst compression stockings and Medi compression stockings are considered amongst the best.

Compression stockings are a special piece of hosiery. Their job is to manage the blood circulation in the legs. They are often used for therapeutic purposes to cure thrombosis, phlebitis and edema. These stockings put gradual pressure on the foot and the lower leg region. In some cases, compression stockings are also used to put pressure in the thigh region. The elastic used in the making of compression stockings is much stronger so that significant pressure can be created in the legs, feet and ankles. Patients wearing Jobst compression stockings and Medi compression stockings are known to experience great relief.

When one wears compression stockings they feel a lot of tightness in their ankles. The pressure of these stockings eases up as they go upward toward the knees and thighs. Compression stockings compress the surface veins, muscles and arteries and force the blood to flow through the circulator channels that are narrower. This in turn increases the arterial pressure and hence, more blood returns to the heart and there is a lesser pool of blood in the feet.

When you go online you find a lot of information on compression stockings. No surprise here because many people use these stockings nowadays.
