Contribution of Asthma Society of Ireland towards Reducing Asthma by Alice

Article published on December 21st 2011 | Health

Ireland is known to have the highest number of asthma cases but the drop in asthma deaths last year has been encouraging prompting health authorities to realize that the campaign towards reduction in asthma has really been a positive effort. Still a lot need to be done and health authorities believe that proper treatment and medicines could further reduce the figures of asthma deaths across the country this year too.

The reports of 2010 were particularly encouraging as the number of deaths due to asthma was reduced to 34, a forty percent reduction from the previous year. The Asthma Society of Ireland hopes to continue the trend in 2011 as an extension of their five year strategy.

Asthma Society is still vigilant on the deaths being reported and the rising number of asthma cases in Ireland. The average deaths due to asthma in Ireland stand at 60 per year and it's really a concern.

Awareness campaign is being conducted by Asthma Society of Ireland to improve the lives of the people and control asthma. The citizens too have become more conscious than before to take suitable precautions to control the allergens and allergies that cause asthma, hay fever, rhinitis and eczema.

The number of companies manufacturing effective allergy products has increased in the past few years and they have been contributing well towards reducing the menace of asthma. Nowadays you have the convenience of pillow covers, mattress covers, duvet covers, allergy spray, miele and cleanaer. These products work well towards making the home allergens free.

The campaign undertaken by Asthma Society has indelibly helped families in acquiring more information about asthma and consequently the methods to control the growing problem. Website offers great deal of information and news are being posted about the latest developments in the drive towards reducing asthma. Booklets, videos online, asthma education, asthma Advice line, training schools and community ensures that asthma victims get well acquainted with the symptoms and undergo proper treatment, and apply strategies to control asthma. Asthma Society makes it a point to provide free of cost services to the families with asthma patients.

Asthma Society in Ireland is collaborating with healthcare service providers to offer the best guidelines and resources to citizens across Ireland. Under the asthma management programme conducted in 2009 and 2010, special guidelines were provided to more than 700 patients.

Hopefully the reduction in the number of asthma cases in 2010 will further accentuate the campaign and diminish the occurrence of asthma cases. Look out for HSE National Asthma Programme 2012.
