What is a mold?

Mold is nothing but a microscopic organism that exists in the nature and hence is present both indoors and outdoors. They are attracted by any wet surface and land on such places by floating through the air. They reproduce via mold spores which are tiny organisms that cannot be seen with the naked eye.

What does it do?

Since molds are attracted to moisture, they settle down on anything that has water on its surface, such as food, plants, air ducts or any part of the house which is affected by moisture such as tiles, wood, etc. its two fold harassment includes:

â€¢ Damage to property

â€¢ Hazard to human health

What must you do?

One cannot see molds with the naked eye and the quicker you deal with them, the better it is for both your house and you. The three-step action plan that you need to take for mold remediation is - Inspect â€” Test â€” Remove.

Inspection â€” This is the first step that involves inspecting the indoors of a house in order to verify whether molds are present or not and if yes, then the type thereof.

Testing â€” This refers to assessing how much spores are present on the affected surface. Through inspection and testing, both the source as well as the solution of the mold problem is found out.

Remediation: This is the last and main stage wherein for the mold remediation charleston sc experts would come in and use their antimicrobial products to screen the indoor air and remove the existing mold from the surface and undertake moisture treatment to remove the problem from the source.
