Get permanent relief with partial knee and anterior hip replacements by Robert Brown

Article published on December 8th 2011 | Health

The days of suffering silently with joint pains due to old age is over. There is relief at hand and the good thing is unlike pain killers, this particular process provides permanent relief. Even till a recent time, people used to suffer from joint pains terribly but had to accept it as an ailment that is inevitable for old age. The only relief was temporary, with pain killers that again had serious side effects. Joint pains are intolerable, especially hip joint pain and knee joint pain that troubles almost all old people all over the world. But now, with the help of medical science and technology, you can get easy relief from knee and hip joint pain through partial knee replacement surgery and anterior hip replacement surgery.

There is partial knee replacement surgery as well as full knee replacement surgery and the one that is suitable for you can only be decided by an expert doctor. If you are suffering from knee joint pains, consult a specialist doctor immediately to know if you too can undergo a knee replacement surgery to get relief. It goes without saying the partial knee replacement surgery is for people who have not been affected that much with knee joint pain, at least not till now. But if your doctor suggests full knee replacement surgery, do not go for partial knee replacement surgery forcefully as that would only harm you. At most what you can do is take a second opinion from another expert doctor.

For anterior hip replacement surgery too, you should first consult a good orthopedics and take opinion on whether you would actually need to undergo the process at all. If there are other ways than going for anterior hip replacement your doctor would surely let you know. Then again, you can always go for a second opinion if the doctor advises anterior hip replacement surgery for you. For the above cases, partial knee replacement as well as anterior hip replacement surgery, even after the process is over and you are declared fit by the doctor, if you feel pain in the replaced joints, you should consult your doctor at once without much ado. It might not be anything dangerous, but it would need immediate attention all the same. Hence do not suffer in silence and accept it as old age when there is a cure to give you permanent relief from joint pains.
